CUSTOMER SPOTLIGHT: University of West Georgia Dining Services

Campus Dining Services Selects Eatec to Streamline Foodservice Operations in 14 Locations

Campus Dining at the University of West Georgia is committed to quality food, excellent service and social responsibility.

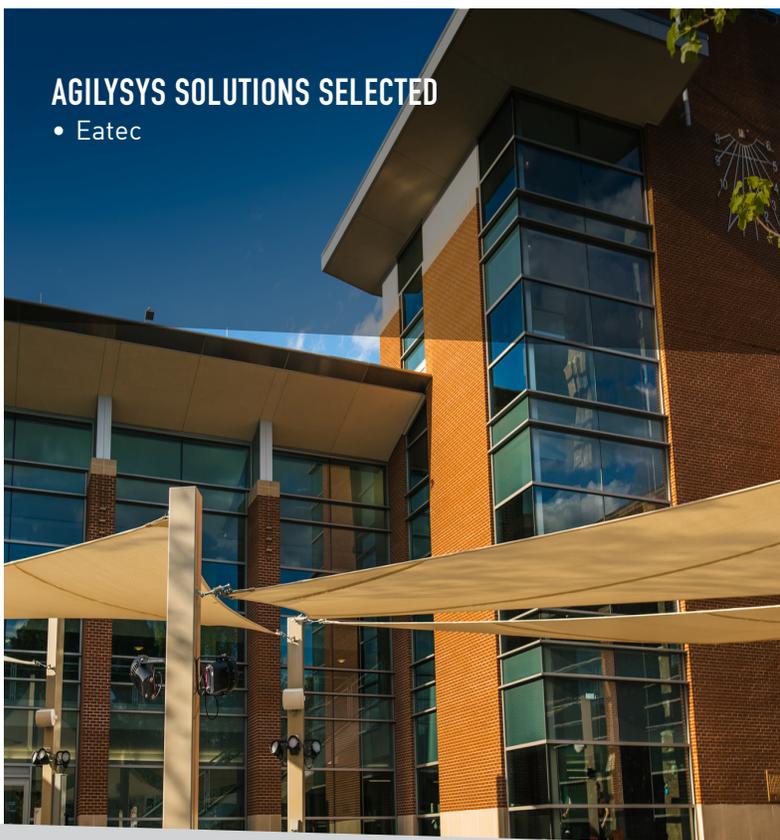

The University of West Georgia had 11,229 undergraduate and 2,291 graduate students in the fall of 2017 and a 20:1 student-faculty ratio. Several dining halls provide a comfortable atmosphere for students to dine and socialize in, and with many other food and beverage outlets on campus, the management team decided to modernize operations with the Eatec® inventory and procurement system.

“After an extensive search for a new inventory and procurement system, we determined that Eatec has all the features and functionality we require to handle our diverse dining scenarios,” said John Lyons, Executive Director of Campus Dining at the University of West Georgia. “The system interfaces to U.S. Foods, our largest vendor, as well as to our accounting and financial software system. Agilysys is also building an interface to our point-of-sale system so that we can import sales data for accurate inventory counts. Eatec will modernize our entire foodservice operation by streamlining the purchasing process, controlling inventory and managing overall costs.”

Eatec, with its customizable modular structure, is ideal for colleges and universities of all sizes. It will enable the dining services team at University of West Georgia to lower food and labor costs, track nutritional information and monitor sustainability performance. The system will help optimize efficiency in residential dining halls, campus restaurants, convenience stores and support campus catering and concessions.
